

Voluntary internships with our Conservation, Research and Education Department

Applications for our voluntary Conservation Education Internship are now open.

We are currently advertising for a Conservation Education Intern at the Hawk Conservancy Trust. This is a fantastic opportunity to gain valuable experience and skills in conservation education research and delivery.

The Intern will help with the work of the Conservation, Research and Education Department. This may include, but is not limited to, the following activities:

- Public engagement and education for conservation
- Assisting with the delivery of education workshops/activities and other daily activities where required
- Contributing to interpretation and educational resource development
- Conservation education and visitor engagement research
- Contributing to content for social media
- Reviewing literature and online media
- Data management and analysis

Start date: Start from May/June 2024 onwards.

Terms: Full-time. Up to 6 months during summer/autumn 2024 (some weekend working will be required). Daily expenses and free accommodation on-site is available if required.

Location: Hawk Conservancy Trust, Andover.

The ideal intern would have:

- A passion for the outdoors and nature, and sharing this with other people
- Background/interest in citizen or behavioural science
- A full driving licence and access to own transport is desirable
- Very good people skills
- Experience with talking to groups is desirable
- Enthusiasm, commitment and reliability

Application: To apply, please email education@hawkconservancy.org with your CV (maximum three pages) and a one page cover letter detailing how you fit the personal specifications and what skills you hope to gain. Applications will remain open until we find the right intern!
